KEY PERFORMANCE INDICATORS

SUMMARY

Hotel sales momentum in Miami Beach has slowed down. Year-to-date through October 2025, eight hotels were sold in the submarket for a combined sales volume of $239 million. One significant transaction accounted for over 85% of the deal volume. The average deal size is roughly $29.9 million, with an average price per key of about $831,000.

Last year, 12 hotel trades took place, totaling $673 million in transaction volume, a significant increase over the 2023 figure. For comparison, the rolling three-year average sales volume is $408 million.

Hotel sales typically involve existing properties or occur after a new construction hotel receives a certificate of occupancy, indicating that the building is safe for habitation and complies with building codes and zoning bylaws. Occasionally, hotel construction projects are sold due to financing issues or challenges in construction and project management. Recent harsh financing conditions and escalating construction costs have posed risks to development projects not coming to fruition.

A stalled redevelopment project in Miami Beach was recently sold. In October, the 60-room Rosewood The Raleigh Miami Beach transacted for roughly $204 million, or $3.4 million per key. New York-based Nahla Capital acquired the project from a joint venture between New York developer SHVO and Deutsche Finance America. The transaction also included an adjacent 1.5-acre parcel, valued separately for approximately $66 million. The buyer also assumed a $250 million loan.

The joint venture acquired three hotel properties in 2019 for roughly $223 million, with plans to demolish two properties and redevelop the Raleigh building to include 60 hotel rooms and 40 condominium units. However, the mixed-use project was plagued by slow condo sales, even after Rosewood Hotels agreed to brand the condos and manage the hotel.

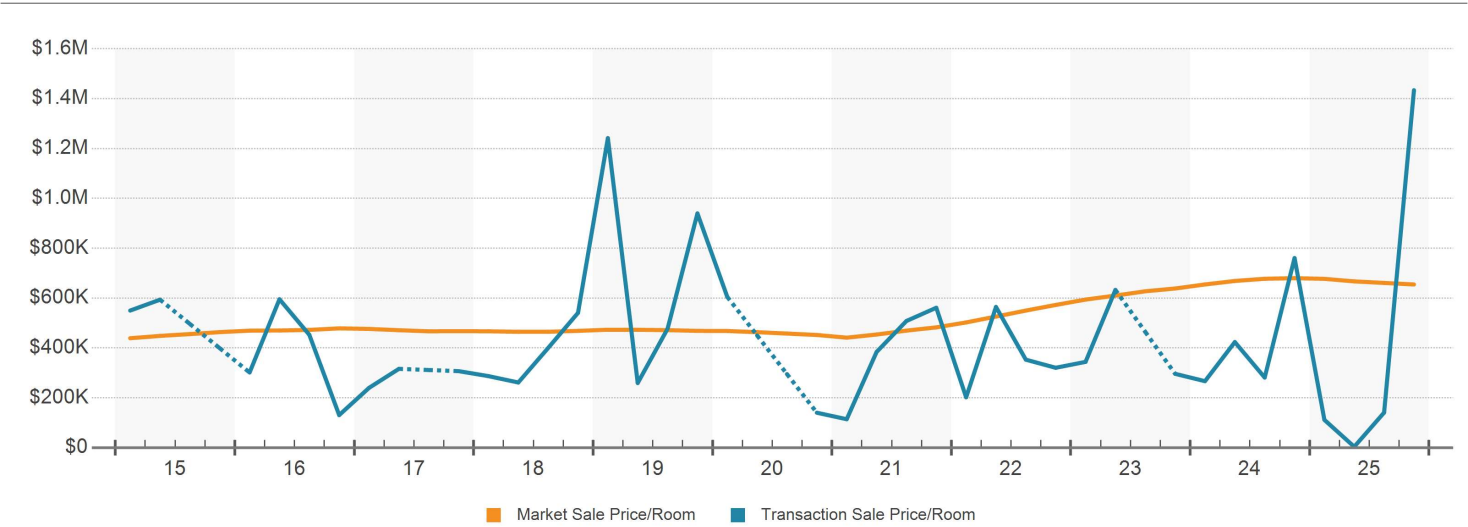

Redevelopment projects have gained momentum post-pandemic due to a natural shift in the highest and best use of commercial real estate properties. Market participants reported that hospitality assets could be redeveloped into apartments, student housing, or senior living communities, given their similar uses of space. Additionally, Miami Beach's reputation as a high-barrier-to-entry market facilitates more land redevelopment projects due to the scarcity of inexpensive, developable land.

In August 2025, the former Bikini Hostel was sold for an allocated $14.3 million, or approximately $64.8 million per acre. A joint venture between JDS Development Group, Terra Group, and Sunset Padel acquired the shuttered property from the Muskat Group. The buyers also purchased an adjacent five-unit multifamily property for an allocated $5.8 million and acquired a controlling interest in the nearby Bay Garden Manor for $120 million. They plan to redevelop the residential building into a luxury condominium tower.

Two properties are on the CMBS watchlist with debt maturity by December 2026. Another two hotels are in special servicing.
